Payment Defaults

A payment default occurs when a business has failed to pay its debts after the agreed payment terms. A series of payment defaults are a key indicator of risk and should be factored in accordingly when deciding to provide credit to a business. We suggest offering reduced payment terms, or, requesting upfront payments for businesses with a history of payment defaults.

Proprietors

Proprietors have a critical impact on the performance of a business. This is why it is important to have as much information on the proprietors of the business you are dealing with. If the proprietor listed is a company or a trust, we suggest that you also run a credit report on that company or trust to get the full picture.

About the Score:

Bureau scores use available Equifax bureau data to calculate a risk estimate. The primary purpose of this score is to predict the likelihood of a future adverse event being recorded on the company's Equifax bureau file or that the company will go into receivership or external administration in the next 12 months. This bureau score incorporates information available on the company's Equifax bureau file as well as on the Equifax bureau files of the company directors, whose bureau files form part of this report, and other companies and/or businesses associated with each of those directors. Where you do not have consent to see the consumer credit file of all directors, the score uses only commercial and public record information on all directors' files.

Disclaimer:

The score is a statistical ranking tool only and as such should always be used in conjunction with your organisation's credit policies and procedures and other relevant information you may have about the company or business. The score should be and is not intended to be the sole basis for making a decision about whether or not to deal with a particular individual, company or business.
